“ We know that no matter what we say or do, we will never be able to help you overcome the great loss and pain that you are facing and will always face at each and every turn in life. Always knowing that she will never be there to share the joys and pains, the good times and the bad times, the graduations, the boring family trips, the weddings, in short, all the times that make life; life. To know that she was taken at the twilight of dawn on the great day called life brings to the surface the endless feeling of grief and pain that torments the very soul to its limits. That pain from which there is no relief, no cure, no magic potion or spell to make it go away, no book that can be read, no trip that can be taken, nothing that can be done to ease this pain of such a great loss.

Except to know that every day of her life, she was loved by her family. That her mother and father, sister, brothers, even her grandmothers and grandfathers, aunts and uncles, nieces and nephews and all that knew her; loved her with that love that is eternal and will last forever. That this love alone and only this love has the power to overcome and lift the soul out from that endless feeling of grief and pain and bring peace.

With this love,

Matt, Kerri, Laura, and Caroline Cragun
