In Jimmie's later years he would grow fond of hunting, fishing and metal detecting for collecting old coins from time to time, he also found a passion to coach little league baseball as well. He would travel with his wife to Las Vegas and New Mexico for getaway trips. If Jimmie was relaxing at home, you could find him watching polka dancing or listening to some of his favorite bluegrass music. Jimmie was an excellent father to Jimmie D Quillin and taught him many life lessons throughout their relationship and would carry on his legacy for years to come.
